This program sponsored in part by a grant from the Hospice Education Institute

Program Description

This workshop is designed for healthcare professionals as well as family members of pediatric patients. It will address the nature of pediatric hospice and palliative care and the ways in which it differs from adult care; ethical decision making; ways of delivering bad news; communication between physicians and families; moral distress; building trust; and advance directives for the unborn. Led by both a physician and a bereaved parent/Hospice Communications Professional, this workshop will address the perspectives of both providers and family members. The workshop is interactive and will include case studies and practical information for parents and professionals.

Objectives

At the conclusion of this workshop, the participant should be able to:

1. Identify distinct differences between adult palliative and pediatric palliative care
2. Define and describe the "Six Step Approach" to delivering bad news to patients
3. List positive approaches to delivering bad news
4. Identify steps to building trust amongst patients and surrogate decision makers in the pediatric palliative care community
5. Recognize issues surrounding surrogate decision making and assent and consent
6. Demonstrate how to discuss issues of assent and consent with families
7. Discern medical ethical issues surrounding the availability of technology and continuance of treatment for pediatric patients
8. Recognize parental issues surrounding medical ethical decision making for families
9. Identify Moral Distress

Speakers:

Dianne Gray & Kelly Komatz, MD

Dianne Gray is the President of Hospice and Healthcare Communications, an international consulting firm focused on furthering education initiatives and advocacy projects on all aspects of hospice, end-of-life and palliative care.

Dianne is a internationally recognized speaker, author and advocate on topics including national and global pediatric palliative care initiatives, communications issues surrounding medical ethical decision making, opioid use in pediatrics and physician/family communications as well as her own personal journey of her family's ten year pediatric hospice/palliative care experience with her son, Austin, who died in February, 2005 as a result of a rare neurodegenerative brain disorder. She is a catalyst for change who continues to be "at the bedside" with families going through the end of life care journey with their own living and dying children.

Dr. Kelly Komatz is one of only 100 pediatricians in the United States who are board certified in Hospice and Palliative Medicine. She has been the Medical Director of Community PedsCare of Community Hospice of Northeast Florida for over five years. She is also the Medical Director of the Quality in Life Team of Wolson Children's Hospital Pain and Palliative Care Consult Service. In addition, Dr. Komatz is Assistant Clinical Professor at the University of Florida College of Medicine in Jacksonville. Dr. Komatz's educational background includes not only the MD degree but also a Masters of Public Health, Community Health from the University of North Florida.

Dr. Komatz has presented nationally on pediatric palliative and hospice care issues, including ethical dilemmas, end of life issues, and delivering bad news. Her audiences include the Children's Hospice International, the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization, the American Academy of Hospice and Palliative Medicine, as well as the Pediatric Academic Society and the American Academy of Pediatrics. Dr. Komatz holds leadership roles in a number of professional organizations advocating to advance the practice of pediatric hospice and palliative medicine.
